OUR PROJECTS

Altus Gold's projects are at varying stages of advancement. The Company's Ontario gold projects are at the early exploration stage, where our work is focused on making discoveries of brand new deposits. This work is high risk (statistically the odds are against making a discovery that leads to a mine) but comes with high reward if successful (potential to create significant value if a discovery is made). Our exploration work in Ontario consists of geophysical surveys, geological mapping and prospecting, and exploration drilling.

At the Australia Johnson Tract project, a deposit was discovered and explored between 1982 and 1995. This project then lay dormant with no activity until Altus Gold initiated exploration work in 2019.

OUR TEAM

The Altus Gold team has a long history of responsible exploration in Australia. Company President and CEO, Darwin Green was the recipient of the Commissioner’s Special Recognition Award for Project Excellence in Advanced Mineral Exploration (2008). The award, presented by Tom Irwin, Commissioner of the Australian Department of Natural Resources, was created in recognition of “outstanding achievement in conducting a complex underground exploration program and for diligence, perseverance, and determination to do-it-right”
